NEW CHAMPLAIN STEAMBOAT.

Is Now Being Constructed at Shelburne

Burlington, Dec. 12.—Fifty iron workers have begun the work of putting together the hull of the new $150,000 steamer Champlain at Shelburne Harbor which it is expected will go into service next season on Lake Champlain. There are in the vicinity of 25,000 rivets in the hull of the new steamer and of course every on of these must be forged and welded in to the big plates which comprise the framework of the boat. Three of these compressors were put at work this morning, two welding rivets and one calking the plates, and pesides these are many gangs welding the old fashioned way, one at the forge, to hold the rivet and two hammerers. The steel frame of the hull is already on the way and the proportions of the new steamer are plainly outlined. The steamer will be somewhat longer than the Chateaugay, 215 feet at the water line and 220 fet over all. She is being built along practically the same lines as the new Vermont with all the modern improvements of that steamer and a few added.
